RATTLERS RUN AMUCK
Rattlesnakes are bold enough—too bold—in this town. Monday Waldo Perkins killed a large diamondback rattler, four and a half feet long, in his yard. The huge reptile with ten rattles was wriggling slowly in the yard when Mr. Perkins spied it. After killing it he had it on display down town. Last week two small diamondback rattlers were killed in the rose garden of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Hughes. A colored man was cutting weeds around the rose bushes when he found them.

What Is Religion?

THAT COLUMN on the first page of today's paper under the heading "Fifty Years Ago," brings an old-timer to a renewal of the question, "What is religion?"

The story mentions that the J. G. Brannen building on North Main had been completed, and that the floors had been slicked for a dance which was to celebrate the completion. That is the same building which stands on the corner of North Main and Courtland street, bright and fresh in its physical appearance today. But there hasn't been a dance there in a long while.

This brings to memory the upsurge in the leading church in Statesboro, which took action against a number of its members who danced at that opening celebration and fired them the church! Some members apologized and were forgiven; others less conciliatory, went to other congregations. There might be mentioned at least one of the old-timers still living who was included in the group fired for dancing.

And the realization is forced that religion has somewhat liberalized in the fifty years since that dance in the J. G. Brannen building.

We are not sure where dances might be recognized an essential phase of church worship, but we are almost sure that any church which frowns on dancing would be looked down on as "old fogey." In the meantime there are yet denominations which frown on dancing, card parties and an occasional cocktail—and we frown at their antiquity.

What is religion?

Are Conflicts Natural?

WHEN NATURE, back in those mysterious days of "the beginning," about which men vaguely speak, started that individual called man, it made him the center of everything—wisdom, ignorance, strength, frailty and the capacity to lead everything below his level.

From that day to the present moment there has been little difference in the characteristics of man—unless it might be suspected that some have grown a little more self-opinionated than sometimes seems necessary or permissible. Even though each individual is entitled to do things according to his inherent capacity, we sort of doubt if it was intended that any one individual should really be looked up to—or down on—as the "it" of creation.

In recognizing self-interest and self appreciation as the natural and essential elements of human nature, as we sort of ruminate on the situation, we are inclined to suspect that loud-mouthed bombasts are even at this day going a little beyond reasonable bounds in their attempts to speak for, and direct the conduct of all other individuals.

Take, for instance, some of these loud-mouthers whose personal business are most frequently separated from the every-day occupations and needs of other fellow men who make up the element which contributes to general financial and social betterment. By what right do these assume authority to prescribe the course of action for the vast multitude, among which element are at least a few who are as capable as they?

The cow which breaks away from the herd, looks back delectfully in sympathy for the herd which it has abandoned—and strays into the wilderness of unbeaten paths—but that same cow comes back with tail aloft and a look of terror when the strange hidden danger comes upon her.

Some men we have in mind, who appear to think themselves to be as wise as bulls, are merely overestimating their individual capacity.

Tattnall County Group Plan Camp Meeting

The eighty-third annual Tattnall county Methodist camp meeting will begin Thursday night, August 21st, and run through Wednesday night, August 27th.

Rev. J. H. Chitwood, district superintendent of the Birmingham district, Birmingham, Ala., will be guest speaker, with preaching twice daily at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. The speakers for the afternoon services, which will be held at 3:30 each day, are preachers from Savannah, district.

An extensive program is being planned for the young people under the direction of Rev. Shannon Holleyway, of Claxton. A modern dormitory which can accommodate eighty young people is located in the row of tents surrounding the tabernacle. The young people are asked to register at the youth cottage on Thursday between 3 and 5 p. m.

Although the meeting is under the general control of the Methodist church, people of all denominations are invited to attend. Older people interested in rooms other than the dormitory may contact George Durcree, chairman of the board of trustees, Claxton. Meals may be bought at the public dining hall at reasonable rates.

The camp site is located between Reidsville and Claxton, and may be reached by turning off Highway 290 at Rogers' filling station and traveling south a distance of two miles. According to the records the first camp meeting held at this site began with a service on October 31, 1867. Prior to that time it was held at a site not far from the Clifton old homestead near Providence church, now in Tombs county.

Bulloch County Ladies Take Special Courses

Everything from the latest information in their teaching field to a picnic at Crow Hollow is being planned for Georgia Home-making Teachers when they assemble in Athens for their three-day annual conference August 11-14.

Mrs. Evelyn DeLoach, Mrs. Lula Parrish, Mrs. Ida Hinton and Mrs. Sue Rowe, home-making teachers in Bulloch county, will take part in the program. The theme is "The Family Centered Curriculum in Home-making Education." They will spend three days finding ways to make their program still more helpful to the families of Georgia.

The teachers will form discussion groups to talk together about their teaching interests in such areas as family relations, child development, foods and nutrition, health and home furnishings, clothing, housing and home furnishings, home management and city adult groups.

Mrs. Hinton has been chosen as chairman of the recreation committee; Mrs. Parrish will help evaluate the conference; Mrs. DeLoach will be recorder for the child development study group, and Mrs. Rowe is recorder for the housing and home furnishing group.

Lanier and daughter, from the West Side Club, Miss Dale Waters and sister and Miss Gene Anderson. We were glad to welcome Mrs. Green, of Statesboro, as a new member. Our president, Mrs. Akins, presided, and the meeting was opened by singing the club song, "Bless This House." Mrs. C. C. Daugherty gave the devotional and Mrs. Carlos Brannon gave a very good report on the 4-H Club trip at camp. She assured us that the boys and girls were well taken care of. Mrs. H. V. Franklin's report was on landscaping. A few of the ladies gave their names to attend the national convention at Raleigh, N. C., in October. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed the refreshments.
